

Sculpture

Sculptures are three-dimensional forms that you can walk around, look at from all different sides, and sometimes even walk through. They can be very tall or really small and can be made of just about anything, including stone, clay, metal, wood, glass, ice, snow, chocolate, and more!

Have you ever made a snowman?

Snowmen are sculptures made out of snow!

Did You Know?

Oils from our hands can damage artwork. Please don't touch the sculpture or other art at Fallingwater.

Look at the poses of the people in these sculptures.

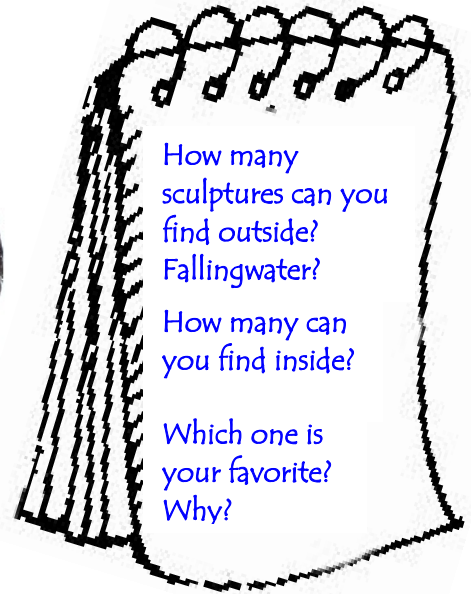

Describe what you see.

What are they carrying?

Does it look comfortable?

How would you carry a baby?

How would you carry something heavy?

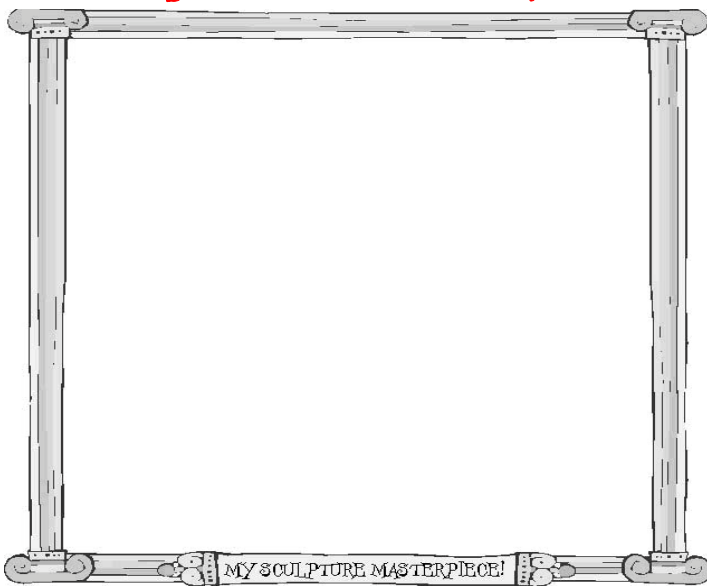

How many sculptures can you find outside? Fallingwater?

How many can you find inside?

Which one is your favorite? Why?

Design Your Own Sculpture!

Now that you've looked at some of the sculptures at Fallingwater, design your own sculpture. Sketch the design here then join us at the Children's Table in the Visitor's Pavilion to create your sculpture in clay.

Sculptures can stand by themselves or be in relief, where the sculpture is still attached to a background and stands out in "High Relief" or "Low Relief" (bas-relief). This sculpture by the kitchen in Fallingwater's Living Room is an example of low relief.

- Look closely at it for thirty seconds and then shut your eyes and describe what you saw.
- Mention as many details as you remember.
- Open your eyes and look at the sculpture again.
- What details did you miss?
